Nowadays, people crave entertainment that's easy to get, doesn't break the bank, and fits into their busy lives. Traditional movie rentals like grabbing a DVD from a store are fading away because they come with headaches like late fees, not much to choose from the shelves, and the hassle of traveling to return them. On the other hand, most online streaming services push only premium subscriptions, which don't always work for people who just want to rent one movie without signing up for a whole package. That's where a simple, user-friendly online streaming system could step in and provide something that lets people pick what they want, when they want it, and how long they want it for, without all the extra strings.
